Power DVD Audio Ripper Crack Free Download MacSunday, April 26, 2008 I have an incredibly cool thing about yesterday - it was my first day of winter break from the Catholic School I attended to my mother to go to Public School. It was also my first day since April 1st that I have not had to walk in the snow to and from school! Oh, it was raining yesterday and I had to walk to school, which I didn't do as much as I usually do, but it was for the best - the roads were slushy and slippery and there was snow on the ground. We had a picnic on Friday that the school had to provide lunch for the students. Our class was supposed to go to the gym, but when we got there, we saw that the gym was closed, so we got to play dodgeball and see who could throw the ball the farthest. It was fun to go to the gym, but I would have rather played more dodgeball, but I had to stop because I had a headache. No comments: About Me I am an 11th grader and I take two semesters off from school during the summer to pursue a career that I love to do. I am a budding Artist and Photographer. I love to sing, draw, do art, write, play video games, and watch anime/manga. I also enjoy photography and am an avid manga reader. I am constantly writing new stories, which I hope to publish for other people to enjoy.Q: Overflow hidden on elements inside a variable width container element I have a fixed-width container element:

`.container { max-width:400px; float:left; }` And I have variable width elements inside this container. `.element { float:left; width:50%; }`
The elements are styled with overflow hidden.
The problem is that the container element has a specified width and it's height is set to auto so it has a variable height.
